"The environment of the centre and the grounds are very conducive to learning and reflection."

"I had very high expectations ... this was even better than I could have hoped for."

"Wonderful balance of theoretical and experiential."

Loyola House offers a series of training programs for those moving into, or already involved with, the ministry of spiritual direction.

The Spiritual Directors' Workshop (SDW) is an intensive 12-day training program in spiritual direction. It includes material and experience which we consider foundational to everyone engaged in spiritual direction.

The SDW offers participants the chance to gain confidence in their own skills and to appropriate of new skills.

This is achieved through high quality presentations, case studies, small group work, study, prayer, and team work. We use the principles of adult learning during the SDW. All of the training programs at Loyola House are rooted in the experience of participants. Likewise, all of the presentations are grounded in the experience of the Loyola House team.

The SDW includes a practicum for participants to do spiritual direction under supervision, as they pray through the 2nd Week of the Spiritual Exercises together.
